Preventing Child Abuse through Education Should be Utah’s Priority

By Representative Angela Romero

In the words of Elizabeth Smart, who advocated for child abuse prevention education before the Utah Legislature this year: “Children are taught to look both ways before crossing the road. They are taught to stop, drop and roll in a fire. They should be given the knowledge to be able to say no, this is wrong, or I am uncomfortable.”

REFERENCES
“The most important thing in our lives is politics. Everything else depends upon it—even freedom of religion. Every freedom we have is completely dependent upon politics. If we have self-government, we must have politicians.”

-Robert H. Hinckley